DETAILED ACTION

Applicants' arguments, filed 8/30/04, have been fully considered but they are not deemed to be persuasive. Rejections and/or objections not reiterated from previous office actions are hereby withdrawn. The following rejections and/or objections are either reiterated or newly applied. They constitute the complete set presently being applied to the instant application.

LACK OF ENABLEMENT

Claims 37-52 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention.

Factors to be considered in determining whether a disclosure would require undue experimentation have been summarized in Ex parte Forman, 230 USPQ 546 (BPAI 1986) and reiterated by the Court of Appeals in In re Wands, 8 USPQ2d 1400 at 1404 (CAFC 1988). The factors to be considered in determining whether undue experimentation is required include: (1) the quantity of experimentation necessary, (2) the amount or direction presented, (3) the presence or absence of working examples, (4) the nature of the invention, (5) the state of the prior art, (6) the relative skill of those in the art, (7) the predictability or unpredictability of the art, and (8) the breadth of the claims.

Art Unit: 1631

The Board also stated that although the level of skill in molecular biology is high, the results of experiments in genetic engineering are unpredictable. While all of these factors are considered, a sufficient amount for a prima facie case are discussed below.

This rejection is maintained and reiterated from the previous office action, mailed 2/25/04. Applicant argues that complex experimentation does not necessarily make it undue, if the art typically engages in such experimentation. In response, the art utilizes experimentation that involves lengthy research projects with polymorphism correlation studies to screen out the effects of random mutations etc. combined with a myriad of Biotechnology tools in order to result in disease correlation to gene sequences that go well beyond the mere querying of individuals as practiced in the instant claims. Thus, the practice of the instant claims are not typically the type of experimentation that is required for such correlative result elucidation. It is thus not predictable that the mere individual querying of the instant claims corresponds to what is performed by those skilled in the art regarding the ability to categorize individuals into groups in order to identify disease-influencing genes. Additionally, applicant has not argued nor established any correspondence between what typically complex and lengthy research projects are performed compared to the instant invention practice. Doberstein et al. is also argued as providing examples of various prior art techniques that use experimentation. In response, this argument lacks any indication of whether this experimentation is routine vs. complex unpredictable research and thus fails to argue the basis for this rejection and therefore is non-persuasive.

No claim is allowed.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
